

A NEW LITERATURE-IN-TRANSLATION SERIES

CORNELL
East Asia Series

is pleased to announce
NEW JAPANESE HORIZONS

The aim of this series is to expand current knowledge of Japan's rich literary tradition in the English-speaking world by giving visibility to a wide range of historical experience and forms of expression. With this goal in mind, the series seeks to provide quality translations of literary works from the classical period to contemporary that are both of interest to a general audience and informative in an academic context.

We solicit translations of Japanese literature from earliest times to the present in areas such as drama, essays, fiction, literary criticism, memoirs, and poetry. Submissions should include

- (1) a proposal with a brief plot/content summary and a description of the translation's contribution to the existing body of work available in English
- (2) a sample translation of one chapter
- (3) the translator's C.V.
